

NITOVILLE INC.

Introducing NitoVille

Gabriel Akindeju

25th Dec 2021

We are NitoVille Inc, Canada; a global unified digital communications concern, with a vision of making human digital interactions real, and enabling us, humans, become one with our very nature, through democratic digitalisation of human interactions.

I am Gabriel Akindeju, Group CEO of NitoVille, and an Information Security professional and CISO of a major New Zealand organisation. I am a thought industry leader, and I am engaged in numerous security related research activities, and currently, a mentor to many professionals within the security and general technology governance and management industry.

I, and the entire Board of Directors of NitoVille Inc, are excited to be able to introduce NitoVille to the world.

The global pandemic over the last 2 years has permanently changed our views of our world; of how we, humans, interact, and associate with one another. We are learning and adapting – new innate skills are being developed in response to what ‘survival of the fittest’ is presenting us, on daily basis; and amidst it all, the demand of our core human need for social interaction, is and will not abate.

Those with fast adapting and evolving neural systems (the brain and associated neural system), e.g., kids, and the younger generations; and of course, the more slowly physiologically adapting adults, are rebuilding sensory perception mechanisms on daily basis. For instance, we are now beginning to build and relearn how to distinguish between human emotions, because we can no longer, at least for now, see the entire human face through current face masking technologies. [Note: I am sure, masking technologies will change and adapt in the future 😊]. For now, our single solace in keeping our societal structures going is digital media; but these have posed considerable constraints on how we, normally live our lives. So, the need for alternatives and/or structural augmentation has never been more acute than now.

The realisation of our very human need, for the now, led to a group of 5 geographically dispersed professionals, coordinated and led by myself, to come together and look for plausible solutions. NitoVille was born out of that coming together! The NitoPhone and associated services are our first step towards a truly democratised digitalisation of human interactions, in a way that will bring us closer to being true and one with our very human nature – who we are, what we are, how we are.

Please allow me, as a member of the human race, to welcome NitoVille and NitoPhone to the world.

At precisely 09:59hrs 25th Dec 2021 (UTC), NitoVille services officially opens, and will welcome registration of users across the globe. Like most ‘firsts’ in the world, this is a soft launch that will enable our team to capture useful insights for platform and service adjustments. We are committed to learning and adapting fast and we are equally committed to all that we, in conjunction and association with you, will do together along this exciting journey of democratising the digitalization of human interactions and becoming one with our own very human nature through digitalisation.

The journey to date would have been impossible without the joint commitments of my NitoVille co-leaders – Adekunle Adisa (USA); Richard Kareem (Canada); Olugbenga Gbadegesin (South Africa); and another esteemed UK-based professional. My expressed and unreserved thanks to you team!! You have been marvellous, and together, we will lead and deliver beyond this immediate vision.

Further, I wish to thank the entire leadership and team at Alianza – Counterpath, Canada, for the support, belief, and opportunity to partner into the future. We are committed to making you proud of our strategic partnership.

To our strong team of Aashmita Naikar (AU); Ayodele Oluyomi (AU); Gbemisola Awojulu (CA); Jatinder Oberoi (NZ); Kelvin Ho (SG); Linda Joyce (NZ); Meire Akpaibor (US); and Mike Parr (NZ), I say thank you for the belief and comradeship. Together, we will deliver and drive change.

To all our esteemed fans – led and coordinated by Promise Akindeju, I say thank you. We have cherished all your constructive feedback and suggestions.

As we welcome NitoVille and NitoPhone to the world, here are some representative ‘welcomes’ from across the globe:
